VOLUME EIGHTEEN — ST. CLOUD, OSCEOLA COUNTY, FLORIDA THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1926 — NUMBER FOURTEEN

Chamber of Commerce Membership Drive Came To Successful Close

The hundreds of people who were standing along the route of the parade put on by the Chamber of Commerce on Monday evening had not long to wait, as the band which was on the first float began playing promptly at the hour set. It was surely gratifying to see the way in which our business and professional men, as well as private citizens, entered into the spirit of the occasion, all floats and cars being lavishly decorated. After parading through the down town section, the crowd followed to the City Park, where for the first time St. Cloud had the pleasure of hearing the new municipal band.

After listening to several delightful selections, President Wm. Landiss of the Chamber of Commerce, explained the object of the meeting and introduced Mayor G. C. Outlaw, whose subject was "Cooperation Between the City Commission and the Chamber of Commerce," citing many things that have been accomplished and are now under advisement as the result of this cooperative spirit.

G. C. Hunter, when called upon said he was attracted to St. Cloud by seeing its possibilities, and by finding a real live Chamber of Commerce here which is essential to the success of any community and enumerated many of the accomplishments of that organization since he and his associates have located here. Among the things in his opinion that should be worked out for the city in the immediate future is a boulevard on the Lake Front, a municipal pier, a hospital and a packing house for fruits and vegetables. Any one of these would be a splendid accomplishment, but by cooperative effort there is no reason why all of these and more cannot be attained.

S. W. Porter when introduced said, "What's the use of waiting until tomorrow to start the drive for membership," the words were taken out of his mouth by R. L. Steen and J. J. Johnston who started the list and before the band played the next selection 125 memberships had been pledged.

The large crowd assembled to listen to the band and enjoy the program seemed loathe to leave. The balmy night, good music and moonlight proved a real fascination to all.

At 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning the captains and their teams assembled at the Chamber of Commerce ready for their mission of securing new members. They returned at noon where a most appetizing luncheon was served and appreciated.

The good time still continued on Tuesday night. New York Avenue was roped off from 10th to 11th streets, and while the orchestra, made up from members of the band, played, all who enjoyed the old fashioned square and round dances entered into this amusement. Later all retired to the lobby and dining room of the Hunter Arms Hotel where the more modern dances were enjoyed.

The luncheon on Wednesday night given to all old and new members at the Tourist Club House in the City Park was the grand finale.

ROBEY'S CASH GROCERY

Another addition to St. Cloud's enterprises is the Robey Cash Grocery in the room formerly occupied by Mrs. Bird's Variety Shop, on the corner of Pennsylvania Ave. and 11th St.

Mrs. Helena Roby, the new proprietress, is well known, having spent much of the time in the city for the last 11 years.

A formal reception and opening will be held Saturday, Nov. 27th, from 3 to 5 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Woodruff, of Marcelona, Mich., are spending some weeks in St. Cloud. They are friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Miner. One of the pleasant occasions of their stay was a chicken dinner given in honor of Mrs. Woodruff's "steenth and Mrs. Miner's "30th" birthdays.

THANKSGIVING DAY

O'er pleasant mead and rugged glen
We keep Thanksgiving Day again,
While bells of joy triumphant ring,
In church and hall the people sing
Their harvest songs so rich and clear
Glad anthems of a fruitful year.
From princely home and cottage neat
Come wanderers back with eager feet
To the old home where childhood hours
Were spent among the fields and flowers,
Where childhood lessons learned so well
It is their joy once more to tell.
Long they have tarried but today
They seek the homes where fathers pray
Where sisters and where brothers stand
To welcome each with loving hand,
Where mothers with fond smiles so dear
Serve once again Thanksgiving cheer.

New Citizens Bank Will Begin Business on First of December

The Citizens' State Bank, recently organized in St. Cloud, will open its doors to the public for a general banking business, Wednesday, December 1st, at 11 o'clock. The capital of the new bank, all paid in, in cash, is $20,000, with a paid in surplus of $5,000, making a combined capital and surplus of $25,000.

The bank in addition to handling a general banking business will have a savings department which will pay 4 per cent on savings deposits. Time certificates of deposit will also bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent.

In announcing the opening of this new institution, Mr. G. C. Hunter desires to lay especial stress upon the fact that the bank will be managed, governed and controlled by a board of directors, all of whom are residents of St. Cloud and community, and this board will consider and pass upon every phase of the business vested in the new institution. Mr. Hunter also stressed the fact that not a single director nor a single employe of the new bank has ever been connected in any capacity whatever with any former banking institution in St. Cloud.

The fundamental policy of this institution as regards any loans made will be that all loans in excess of $500 must be approved by the board of directors sitting in regular meeting, and all loans under $500 must be approved by a loan committee to consist of not less than three members of the board of directors. The cashier not being permitted to act upon his own responsibility regarding the loaning of any of the banks funds.

Every borrower must produce a financial statement which is to form a permanent record in the bank.

Every borrower will be held within certain loan limits regardless of financial worth.

No loans will be made on unimproved property.

Loans made on improved property will not be in excess of 50 per cent of the value of such property, the value being determined not by the borrower but by the board of directors.

No loans of any character will ever be made in excess of 20 per cent of the capital and surplus of the bank regardless of the value of the security offered.

A reasonable amount of surplus funds will be invested in Liberty Bonds and other liquid securities and the lawful cash reserve will be maintained in depository agencies approved as such by the State Banking Department and in strict conformity with banking laws.

Frequent statements of the financial condition of the bank will be published in the St. Cloud Tribune whereby each depositor will understand the financial condition of the institution.

Mr. Hunter also states that the bank will be operated for the express purpose for which a bank is created, that of being a safe, reliable and substantial institution to safeguard the money of the depositors whether large or small, and to make loans in accordance with the principle that will better promote and advance the commercial, industrial and civic growth of St. Cloud, and finally there will never be any friendship loans.

The officers and directors of the new institution are as follows:

G. C. Hunter, president, who came to this city about two years ago and has been prominently connected with all movements tending to advance the community general welfare. Mr. Hunter and his associates have just completed the Hunter Arms Hotel, without doubt the most beautiful building in the county and in this section of the state. Mr. Hunter is also engaged in building an exclusive residential section of the city known as "Gallon Gardens."

S. W. Porter, vice president, has been a resident of the city since the birth of St. Cloud, sixteen years ago, and has through these years been a leading and commanding figure in every cause that has contributed to the city's growth, enjoying the confidence of his clients in the real estate and insurance business. Through all these years is evidence of the strength he will add to this new institution.

E. M. Goodrich, cashier, is moving here from Island Falls, Maine, where he was cashier of the Kathdin Trust Co., for the past six years. Mr. Goodrich is from a very successful bank and one of the largest in that section of Maine and will be pleased to greet old friends and acquaintances in his new home.

Mr. G. A. Peed, director, came to St. Cloud from Orlando eight years ago and was engaged during all these years in the grocery business in which he was highly successful. This business he sold less than a year ago and is now engaged in the lumber business as one of the owners of the St. Cloud Lumber & Supply Co. Mr. Peed enjoys the confidence of a large number of the citizens of the entire community and his connection as director gives to the new bank increased confidence to all those with whom it will have business relations.

Mr. H. F. Zetrouer, director, a native of Florida and a graduate of the University of Florida, came to St. Cloud three years ago and is superintendent of the city schools. Under his management the schools of St. Cloud have shown a very rapid and substantial growth and the high school has as high a rating as any high school in the State of Florida. The new high school building has been built since Mr. Zetrouer came here and at the present a new grade school is under construction.

Mr. T. G. Moore, director, came to St. Cloud three years ago from Mississippi and engaged in the restaurant business which he successfully conducted until about two years ago when he became vice president of the St. Cloud Real Estate & Investment Co. In addition to his connection with the above company he has been engaged in building houses, independent of his company, he having recognized the fact that the growth of St. Cloud was dependent upon homes to care for the winter influx of tourists. Mr. Moore is vice president of the local Chamber of Commerce and one of the board of governors, being unanimously re-elected to that position last June. He has built up a reputation of fair dealing, honorable effort and a man whose word is dependable.

Mr. G. M. Moses, director, enjoys the distinction of being the largest fruit grower in this section of Florida, his groves being near Narcoossee and in this business he has been eminently successful. Mr. Moses is the type of individual who realizes that the fundamental wealth of any community is that wealth that can be derived through the production and sale of its own commodities. The connection of Mr. Moses with the new bank is of sound value to the new institution.

J. M. Griffin Lumber Company Host to St. Cloud Chamber of Commerce

On Friday evening the members of the St. Cloud Chamber of Commerce were the guests of the J. M. Griffin Lumber Company at Holopaw. Cars began to assemble for the motorcade to the mill at 6:30 on Tenth Street in front of the Chamber of Commerce rooms, and promptly at 7:00 the cars, 60 or more in number, started the procession which arrived at Holopaw an hour later.

About 300 visitors were escorted over the mill where, from an elevated platform, they viewed the operation of the gigantic machinery. This permitted a comprehensive insight into the workings of a large lumber mill, the mill at Holopaw being the second largest in the State. This is electrically driven and lighted and adding to the brilliancy of the illumination was the huge burning sawdust pile which cast a glow over the mill and the little community as well.

After inspecting the mill the visitors were invited to assemble in the auditorium of the school building. The committee from St. Cloud, having previously arranged with Mr. Henke, the director of the new municipal band, to play on this occasion, the first concert of the season was presented.

A. M. Foote, representing the Griffin Lumber Company, gave an address of welcome which did away with all feeling of restraint and made everyone feel as James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet wrote, "Home folks at home."

The response to the welcome was given by S. W. Porter who stressed the point "be neighborly," and in his genial, jovial way made everyone feel that there was no possibility of being anything else but neighborly. In demonstration of the neighborly feeling of St. Cloud, the citizens of Holopaw were invited to attend the Community Christmas Tree to be given on Christmas night at the City Park.

The quartet, composed of Messrs. H. S. Dawley, Dr. Wm. Landiss, S. W. Porter and E. N. Bennett, of the Chamber of Commerce, were heartily received in their several numbers.

The main address of the evening was made by G. C. Hunter, one of St. Cloud's esteemed citizens, who sighted in the future, as in the past, that much real progress, development, and constructive community building, would be accomplished by the cooperation of the two "neighborhoods," St. Cloud and Holopaw.

Mr. J. M. Griffin when called upon expressed his appreciation of the friendship shown by the large number of St. Cloud people who responded to the invitation to visit the mill. Calling Secretary Wheat of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Griffin said that he had received his letter with reference to the membership drive for the Chamber of Commerce and had left it unanswered in order that he might give his reply in person on this occasion. He then gave the renewal of ten memberships for the members of the company, which was graciously received by Mr. Wheat as a good omen for the launching on the drive that is on this week.

During the evening Miss Repps Nichols, of Cherokee, Alabama, at present a teacher in the school at Holopaw, sang "Just a Wearyin' for You," and responded to an encore.

At the close of the program the ladies of Holopaw presented their part of the evening, a delicious lunch consisting of salad, chicken salad sandwiches, hot chocolate and coffee.

Mr. Foote could hardly find words to express his feeling for the splendid evening's entertainment, saying no program would be complete without hearing from Mrs. M. P. Foster of St. Cloud. Briefly and in a cheery manner did she express the appreciation of everyone for the wonderful hospitality shown and to the ladies of Holopaw, who expected possibly half as many to serve yet had prepared an abundance for all. Mrs. Foster asked all from St. Cloud to rise and salute the ladies and company for the wonderful entertainment.

BEAUTY CONTEST AND CROWNING KING AND QUEEN

Under the direction of Mrs. H. F. Zetrouer and Mrs. A. E. Cowger the beauty contest was one of the spectacular features of the Legion festival.

Six of St. Cloud's attractive young ladies who had been entered as contestants came on the stage, then retired and entered one at a time, then all returned together dancing gracefully, giving the judges opportunity for decision. Miss Edith MacPherson was chosen.

Crowning Queen and King

The royal party was escorted through the aisle by their court while the coronation march was being played by Mrs. A. B. Wiggington. They were led by their herald, Perry Coleman, and crown bearers, Bettie Cottrelle and Bettie Tullis, the Queen, Mrs. Horace Zetrouer, with her train bearers, Ross Bloech and Jimmie Conn, and maids of honor, Misses Eleanor and Abbie Far and Martha Parker. The King, Clarence Dawley, was attended by Henry Caterer.

As they mounted the band shell Mrs. Major Brooks and Mrs. Lindholm sang "God save our country, to the following words, composed by Mrs. Brooks: God bless our Legion's King.

God bless our Legion's King
Loud may his praises ring,
God bless our King.
May he be always true
To the Great Legion's cause,
So sing with heart and voice,
God bless our King.

God bless our Legion's Queen,
On her be pleased to pour
Thy choicest gifts.
Oh may we give our strength
Our love and loyalty,
To her for evermore.
God bless our Queen.

Then followed the crowning of the Queen by Mrs. Mary George, president of the Auxiliary, and the King by Bertram Crawford, commander of the Legion. The audience joined in singing, "Keep the home fires burning," and closed with "America."

SHUFFLE BOARD IS POPULAR GAME HERE

When the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce asked me to write something that would let the people know about the shuffle boards here in St. Cloud, one little instance that happened on the way down here came to my mind.

We spent the night at Ocala. About noon we came into a good looking town about eighty miles north of St. Cloud. We parked in front of a cafe and went in to dinner, and it was a good one, too. When we came out to get in our car a nice appearing young man accosted us and said, "I am secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. I noticed your northern license and wondered where you were going to spend your winter, and why." We told him that we had spent the last three winters on the West coast but this year we were going to St. Cloud. We explained that we had visited some friends in St. Cloud's last spring and had such a good time that we decided to spend the winter there and said that rents were not so expensive, living was not so high, and that they had the games that we enjoyed, and incidentally mentioned that it really was the shuffle boards that we were so much interested in. He asked what they were and became interested at once, and said, "Well, if it needs those games to draw people we will sure have some here in this town."

Now, how many of you people here in St. Cloud know what this game is that brings strangers to your town? Some day take a stroll to the City Park and you'll find the jolliest bunch of people shuffling blocks across a fifty foot court of cement, and when you have watched a while take one of the long handled cues and try it. You will soon get interested and then you will realize what you have been missing. You will tell your friends and before the season is over St. Cloud will need to spend all her money building more courts, and it will soon get noised around that you can have just as good a time in St. Cloud as in the larger cities, and maybe we could put up some good tournaments and invite the shufflers here from outside. That would be a good way to advertise St. Cloud.

M. VEACH.

LETTERS TO THE TRIBUNE

Editor Tribune:

Some things we might do for St. Cloud, with undoubted profit to ourselves.

At least two hundred could put in electric ranges, flatirons, sweepers, hot water heaters, and many other conveniences that would add to the pleasure and comfort of the home and at the same time lighten the house work. This would give the city light plant a paying load when a load is needed.

Hundreds could put in city water and make provision for sprinkling their lawn, this would beautify the city as well as their own home and add to the value of both.

Hundreds could and should mow their parking and not stop until they had reached the car rut in the street; this would relieve the city of a lot of wasted effort and expense; the city can not make your place look neat without your help.

Hundreds could see how much rubbish they could bury, with good profit to their growing trees and shrubs, instead of piling it in the street for the city to haul at big expense. If you have a spark of "Hoover" in you you will not waste, grass, leaves, rags, papers, cans, vegetable and table waste, but bury it with a foot of earth over the top. Try it, plant a tree or a shrub over a hole containing five or ten bushels of assorted refuse and see it grow. Broken glass and crockery are about the only things to keep out.

Hundred could plant roses and some more roses and many other flowering shrubs, vines and plants with huge pleasure and profit.

Practically every one can have a back door garden of ten or multiples of ten feet square with which to amaze their friends, neighbors, and relatives by keeping accurate account of the amount and number of radishes, tomatoes, potatoes, beans, beters, cabbage, celery, strawberries, pineapples, cucumbers and so forth that ten feet square will raise. Do this. Keep the record. Tell it to the world and you will help your St. Cloud and yourself beyond your fondest hopes.

JOHN F. BAILEY.

THE WORLD GROWS BETTER

(By Ruth Raymond, St. Cloud, Fla.)

The world grows better every day,
And men to nobler deeds aspire;
The seers of old, who once held sway,
Knew little of the soul's desire.
They knew not virtue's priceless worth,
They knew not love's compassion pure,
They never hoped to live on earth
A life of joy that would endure.

Today men aim for higher things,
And seek to benefit mankind.
Earth's angels have no need of wings
The wounds of suffering ones to bind.
The world grows better, 'tis God's plan
His children all at last to save,
For this, when first the world began
To every one a soul He gave.

FLORIDA WILD FLOWERS REVIEWED BY DR. L. H. UPHOFF

WINTER PARK, Fla., Nov. 18—Commended by Dr. L. H. Bailey, president of the American association for the advancement of science, a popular handbook for flower hunters, entitled "Florida Wild Flowers" has just come from the press. The author is Mrs. Mary Francis Baker, wife of Professor-emeritus of science at Rollins college. She has spent many years studying the flora in different parts of Florida and in the difficult work of flower photography, and has written on Florida wild flowers for nature magazines.

In her book Mrs. Baker has accurately described 700 of the more common and interesting wild flowers of Florida and has made their identification very simple. Heretofore the only sources of information has been ponderous technical manuals of botany.

All the plants described are arranged in the systematic order of modern botany and are grouped in families. The 20 species of insect-catching plants which are important among Florida flora are discussed in detail. These plants have the extraordinary habit of catching and devouring insects. Special attention is given to air plants, trees orchids and ferns, which are peculiar to this state.

Garden plants related to the native flora are also considered in this volume.

"At last we have a book on wild plant life of Florida which is of unusual value to any plant lover and should be found in the hands of every high school and college student interested in nature of our state. It can be easily used on trips and when you find a plant you do not know it can be easily and quickly determined in this book.

WAS TORTURED BY RHEUMATIC PAIN

Found help at last in simple home treatment

How an obstinate case of rheumatism was given relief by a simple home treatment is told in this letter from England.

"I am at times quite crippled from rheumatism," writes Mrs. E. M. Ross of 50 Combes Grove, London. "After one application of Sloan's Liniment, I find comfort and can move with ease. I apply Sloan's lightly and in a short time the pain goes."

Sloan's gives real relief because it doesn't just deaden the nerves. It helps your body to throw off the cause of the trouble.

Just put a little Sloan's on lightly. A healing tide of fresh, healing, germ-destroying blood is sent tingling through the aching place, and pain, swelling and stiffness are quickly relieved. So clean, pleasant and easy to use, too. Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

Constitutional Amendments Approved By Vote in Florida Election This Month

ATTORNEY GENERAL COMPLETES ARGUMENT BEFORE U. S. COURT ON INHERITANCE TAX LEGISLATION.

Auto Tags for Cars Used in 1927 Will Be Shipped County Agents on December 1 From State Plant.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 24.—All three constitutional amendments put to vote in the recent general election were passed, with the one allowing the Legislature to appropriate money for common schools receiving more support than either of the other two. Republicans threatened in several counties, the official canvass of the state showed but in spite of that the entire state Democratic ticket came through safely.

Following are the results:

United States Senator—Duncan U. Fletcher, 51,054; W. R. O'Neal, 6,133; John M. Lindsey, 8,381.

Representative in Congress — First district, H. J. Drane, 16,004; Oen M. Chapin, 6,007; Second district, R. A. Green, 6,727; A. F. Knotts, 1,080; Third district, Tom A. Yon, 7,156; J. H. Drummond, 1,084; Fourth district, W. J. Sears, 19,578; Leroy D. Householder, 2,783; W. C. Lawson, 4,235.

Attorney general—John B. Johnson, 39,390; Fred W. Marsh, 12,443.

Supreme court justices—Armstead Brown, 33,600; Rivers Buford (unexpired term), 37,427; Rivers Buford, 37,941; William H. Ellis, 32,209; Louie W. Strum, 37,078; Fred Cubberly, 7,597; William M. Gober, 9,255; Harry W. Reinstine, 4,904; E. P. Axtell, 9,215; E. E. Calloway, 9,866; E. B. Kurtz 5,404; John J. Lawless, 6,545.

Railroad commissioner—R. L. Eaton, 39,083; Eugene S. Matthews, 35,674; F. F. Bingham, 10,549; R. G. Smith, 8,159; Hugh M. Prather, 4,638; Edward Ecffert, 3,915.

Proposed school amendment—For, 26,401; against, 15,602.

Proposed amendment restricting ownership of Florida land to those eligible to become citizens—For, 18,574; against, 15,668.

When it was seen the proposed school amendment would carry, State Treasurer John C. Luning in a letter to Gov. John W. Martin recommended that the next Legislature be asked for permission to use interest on state money temporarily in banks as part of the school relief fund.

Until last month, the interest from state funds in banks had been put into a sinking found for several years, and was used to retire $601,567 in bonds with interest which the state owed to the school fund. Now that this has all been paid back, the state treasurer urges that this money, instead of being placed indiscriminately in the general revenue fund be a constant source of revenue for school aid.

Attorney General John B. Johnson has finished his argument before the United States Supreme Court in seeking to prove to that court that Florida has a right to test the constitutionality of the Federal inheritance tax provision of the Revenue Act of 1926. This act provides that only those states having a state inheritance tax shall receive back 80 per cent of the Federal inheritance tax. This cuts off Florida, and when passed was aimed at this state because Florida had been attracting much wealth by abolishing that kind of a tax.

Attorney General Johnson was accompanied to Washington for his oral argument by Gov. John W. Martin. Governor Martin attended a meeting of the executive committee of the governors' conference and conferred with government officials concerning the possibility of getting Federal aid in draining the Everglades. He was present in the supreme court when the attorney general made his argument. Thomas B. Adams of Jacksonville and Col. Peter O. Knight of Tampa accompanied the state officials to the court.

It will probably be several weeks before the court can act on the case of admitting the Florida brief. If Florida is permitted to file her brief, it is commonly conceded that the law will be thrown out, as even the government agents tacitly admit it to be unconstitutional.

Florida motor car tags for 1927 will be shipped from the new state tag plant at Raiford to the county agents beginning December 1, it was announced by Charles W. Hunter, supervisor of industries.

The plant is making about 12,000 finished tags a day and when this year's allotment of 511,000 tags is finished, the machines will begin at once on those for 1928.

Meantime Mr. Hunter is bidding for the tag business of half a dozen Southern states, as well as highway and city street markers.

Miss Ida Adelaide Anders, former assistant professor of home economics at Iowa State College, will succeed Miss Eloise D. Berry as state supervisor of home economics, it has been announced by W. S. Cawthon, state school superintendent.

The death warrant for Rufus Chesser, Clay county boy who murdered his sweetheart, Sally Boyles, and another person, has been signed by Governor Martin and the electrocution date set for the week of February 14.

Tallahassee was virtually a deserted village on November 20, the opening date for the hunting season. Every available man went to the woods or the lakes, and only the fact that the date fell on Saturday accounted for anyone remaining with his business.

In opening the West Coast extension of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad from Fort Myers to Naples and the East Coast extension from West Palm Beach to Miami, the Orange Blossom Special, crack train of the line, will run from New York January 5, arrive in Naples January 7 and in Miami January 8, crossing on the Seaboard track opened from Tampa to West Palm Beach two years ago.

This plan was related to Governor Martin in a telegram from S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard, and inviting the governor to join the train at Jacksonville and to make a speech somewhere along the line. Prominent men from many Northern cities will be aboard the train when it ushers in trunkline service over the Seaboard to both lower coasts.

South Florida will have a majority in the house of representatives of the next Legislature for the first time in the history of the state, although the senate will have a majority of four from the northern part of the state. Running a line through Marion county, the geographical center of Florida and including Levy and Volusia counties, South Florida will have 48 of the 95 members of the house and 17 of the 38 senators.

The reapportionment act of 1925 and the addition of new counties is responsible for the change. South Florida previously having only 38 out of 86 representatives and 10 out of 32 senators.

OBSCENE MAGAZINES BARRED AS INTER-STATE MATTER

(Tampa Tribune)

Federal officers called attention yesterday to the fact that obscene magazines, such as those against which Mayor Wall is waging a fight, cannot be shipped by express. The law which prohibits the handling of this sort of stuff by mail applies with equal force to express, if it is an interstate shipment.

It was recalled that a minister some years ago was convicted and given a three-year sentence for shipping one of his books by express to another state. The book could not go by mail. The accused tried the express route, but was caught.

Post office inspectors, always on the job, have a better means of locating improper literature than would be the case with the express company forces. In his effort to stop the sale of offending matter in Tampa, Mayor Wall is striking at the local source, that is, the person selling it. An ordinance will be put through by the city commission under which persons selling obscene magazines may be arrested by the police and tried in the municipal court. There is at present a state statute, with trial in the state court, and Chief Youk has informed the mayor, who had advised him of this law, that he would proceed to arrest dealers on whom stands are found magazines of the type not permitted to be shipped from one state to another by federal act.

WHAT A TEACHER SHOULD BE

Edgar W. Knight, professor of Education, University of North Carolina, very pertinently says: "The teacher cannot give that which he does not himself possess."

When parents become dissatisfied with the progress of their children at school or notice that their boys and girls are acquiring ideals and ambitions that are not admirable, it is worth while to start an investigation of their teachers. Are those teachers well educated? Are they men and women who measure up with the best? Are they equipped with knowledge that makes them real leaders?

Professor Knight deals especially with that intangible quality known as "personality". The teacher with personality is the one who leaves an enduring influence. He somehow has the gift of getting into the heart of his pupil and there he leaves an impress that will be a directing power in the life of that child through all its years.

The teacher, Professor Knight rightly insists, should have a sense of humor. "He must have initiative and resourcefulness, tact and industry. He must be naturally honest intellectually and morally."

"One is not a teacher of subject matter," Dr. Knight explains, "but of children and youth, of men and women. He should be as truly their teacher by what he is as by what he does or says outside as inside the school."

So there you have it. It is what the teacher IS that counts. If the teacher is scholarly he will give his pupils vastly more than if he were relying merely upon the meagre preparation that leads to a teacher's certificate. If a teacher is broadly interested in the affairs of the world and makes a practice of getting accurate information, he will constantly contribute this knowledge to the boys and girls in his care. If a teacher is imbued with fine ideals and adheres to sterling principles of good manhood, he will guide his pupils into the highways leading to the upper places.

The teacher, however, can only give what he himself possesses. He may make a bluff at giving. He may get by with his pretense, his inability, his insincerity for many years. His pupils may even gain much through their very faith in him. But the glitter will all be gone some day, if there is no solid worth beneath it.

Dr. Knight says that the real test of good teaching is in the product. "Does it arouse the pupil to energetic action for the improvement of himself and of conditions about him?" Dr. Knight asks. "Does it direct his effort toward worthy and noble ends? Does it help him to form manly, tasteful and proper habits? Does it create within him thirst for knowledge and for personal excellence?"

Questions of that sort, the North Carolina educator would have pupils ask themselves in taking measurement of their teachers. But they are questions that earnest teachers will ask themselves, and endeavor to answer in sober honesty.—Sarasota Times.

GREAT CARE IN MAILING CHRISTMAS GIFTS URGED

Postage—Prepay postage fully on all mail matter.

Addresses—Address all matter plainly and completely in ink, giving street address or box or rural route number whenever possible. Place sender's return card in upper left corner of address side. Tags should not be used unless necessary, in which case a copy of the address and return card should be placed inside the parcel for identification if tag is lost.

Packing and Wrapping—Pack articles carefully in strong, durable containers. Wrap parcels securely but do not seal them except when bearing a printed label or indorsement reading "Contents: Merchandise. Postmaster: This parcel may be opened for postal inspection if necessary," together with name and address of sender, as sealed parcels not so labeled or indorsed in printing are subject to postage at the letter rate.

Limit of Weight and Size—Parcels may not exceed 84 inches in length and girth combined nor weigh more than 70 pounds if for delivery within the first, second or third zone, or 50 pounds if any other zone.

Permissible Additions and Inclosures—Parcels may be marked "Do not open until Christmas," this being permitted in order to encourage early mailing.

Written greetings such as "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Years," "With best wishes," and names, numbers, or symbols for the purpose of description may be enclosed with third or fourth class (parcel post) mail. Books may bear simple dedicatory inscriptions not of personal nature. Other written additions subject parcels to letter postage.

Do not enclose letters in parcels, as doing so would subject entire parcels to letter postage. Communications prepaid at the first class rate may be sent with parcels prepaid at the third or fourth class rate by securely attaching the envelopes containing the letters or other written matter to the outside of parcels. (See art. 55, p. 15, July, 1926, Postal Guide.)

Seals—Christmas seals or stickers should not be placed on the address side of mail.

Insurance — Valuable parcels should be insured.

Where to Mail Parcels—Uninsured parcels 8 ounces or less in weight may be mailed in street letter or package boxes, at all classified stations and branches, and at such numbered stations as are designated to receive parcels. Parcels weighing over 8 ounces cannot be mailed in street boxes, but must be taken to the main post office or classified station or branch. Parcels containing meat, food products, cut flowers, or other perishable matter should be mailed only at the main post office or one of the large classified stations.

BLOCKER-GARSIDE WEDDING

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Nov. 9.—Banana palms, hot house ferns, Southern bamboo, Spanish moss and yellow chrysanthemums formed a charming background for the marriage this afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Marion Garside to J. Edgar Blocker, which was solemnized at the First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. John R. Cunningham, officiating.

Numbers of friends were present to witness the nuptials, and reserved seats were marked by white tulle streamers.

The wedding music was furnished by Miss Margaret Merchant, organist, who played a varied program as the guests assembled. Just prior to the entrance of the bridal party Mrs. J. E. Graves sang very sweetly, Cadman's "At Dawning." The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played as a processional and Mendelssohns Wedding March as the recessional.

Ushers were Clarence O'Neil of this city and Orville R. Davis of Leesburg, who at the appointed hour entered by opposite aisles and took their places in front of the chancel.

The maid of honor, Miss Peggy Hutchinson of Miami, a pretty brunette, attired in a simple frock of yellow crepe de chine, fashioned with tight waist, sleeveless, and full skirt, entered alone. She carried a large arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The bride followed and was joined by the groom who entered with his best man, Ocras Marcus, of Tampa, from the the vestry. Dr. Cunningham performed the ever impressive ring ceremony.

The bride, who is a lovely, sweet and unassuming young woman, was beautiful on her wedding day in her simple wedding frock of white Molly o'crepe, a sleveless model, with tight bodice and full shirred skirt. Her white tulle veil was caught to her coiffure with a bandeau of orange blossoms and fell in long, soft folds. Her flowers were a huge arm bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Immediately af tre the ceremony Mrs. Blocker changed her wedding gown for a traveling dress of channel red crepe and gun metal hose and shoes and other accessories to match. With this she wore a most becoming black hat.

Mr. Blocker and his bride will enjoy a short honeymoon in the mountains of Tennessee, returning to this city the first of next week.

Mr. Blocker is a prominent young business man, being manager of Wilson Company's store, while his wife is also connected in business circles, being bookkeeper for this popular concern.

Friends unite in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Miss Garside formerly lived in St. Cloud and only recently visited her brother, Frank Garside, on S. Ohio Ave. She has many friends here who extend congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dilson, of Farmington, Me., and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Arnold, of Newport, R. I., are visiting their cousins, L. L. Baker and wife.

BAG LIMIT IS NAMED FOR SPORTSMEN

TALLAHASSEE, Nov. 17—Although the federal law for hunting migratory birds opened on November 1, sportsmen of Florida may not under the law, kill them until the state law opens Nov. 20, J. B. Royall, state game commissioner, announced.

The federal open season on migratory birds is Nov. 1 to Jan. 31, and the state law for hunting Nov. 20 to Feb. 15. After January 31, Florida sportsmen may not kill migratory birds under the federal law, it was explained.

Mr. Royall also called the sportsmen's attention to the "bag limit" which has prevailed in Florida for some time. There may be a few counties, he said, which provided for a further limitation, but none of them permits the killing of more game than is listed in the state law.

Following is the bag limit:

The day's limit is one deer, two turkeys, 20 quail, 25 ducks, 8 geese, 8 brant, 20 Wilson snipe, 6 woodcock, 25 in all rails, coots and gallinules, 15 in all plovers and yelowegs, and 25 doves.

The season's limit is wto deer, 5 turkeys, 200 any other kinds of game birds in a year.

Party bag limit:

Parties of three or more, two deer, turkeys.

Montgomery Man With Stomach Trouble, Loss of Appetite and Run-Down Condition Regains Good Health. Now Eats Everything.

Many men endure pain and suffering needlessly. Their work suffers. Perhaps success that might have been theirs becomes failure. John R. Davis, 608 Clay Street, Montgomery, Alabama, says: "I will gladly write to anyone who wants to know about Tanlac. For it has never failed to help me.

"For some time my stomach was in such bad shape that I could not eat a great many things without suffering. Meats and cabbage disagreed with me. My troubles became worse. I felt weak and had to drive myself to work. Although I would be too sleepy to sit up in a chair I could not sleep in bed. In search for relief I began taking Tanlac.

"Since then Tanlac has always been in our house. It brought me relief. I can eat everything, even cold lunches, without suffering. It built up my strength and gave me good health. My 13-year-old boy is taking this tonic now. And it is helping him to keep his strength through the growing years."

COOLIDGE SETS NOVEMBER 25 AS THANKSGIVING DAY FOR NATION

President Coolidge by proclamation has designated Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving day throughout the nation, making that day a holiday in every state in the union, as is customary. The proclamation follows:

As a nation and as individuals, we have passed another twelve months in the favor of the Almighty. He has smiled upon our fields and they have brought forth plentiful; business has prospered, industries have flourished and labor has been well employed. While sections of our country have been visited by disaster, we have been spared any great national calamity or pestilential visitation. We are blessed among the nations of the earth.

Our moral and spiritual life has kept measure with our material prosperity. We are not unmindful of the gratitude we owe to God for His watchful care which has pointed out to us the ways of peace and happiness; we should not fail in our acknowledgement of His divine favor which has bestowed upon us so many blessings. Neither should we be forgetful of those among us who, through stress of circumstances, are less fortunately placed, but by deeds of charity make our acknowledgement more acceptable in His sight.

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, do hereby set aside Thursday, the twenty-fifth of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that on that day the people cease from their daily work and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received and seek His guidance that through good deeds and brotherly love they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at the City of Washington, this thirtieth day of October, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-first.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

By the President:

JOSEPH C. GREW,
Acting Secretary of State.

THANKSGIVING

By presidential proclamation today has been set apart for the annual observance of Thanksgiving. This worthy custom, inaugurated by the Pilgrim Fathers, offers an opportunity for sober reflection to those who are truly cognizant of the continued beneficence of the Creator and are mindful of the many blessings that this nation enjoys.

The bleak and stormy coast of New England, surely a forbidding approach to the mysterious new world, a coast lined with giant, wind-swept oaks and dense undergrowths which seemed alive with copper colored men of hostile mien, presented a desolate outlook at best, and yet it is reported that those stout hearts who braved the fury of a rudely charted ocean and whose future was extremely uncertain by reason of the wintry blasts, scarcity of supplies, hidden enemies and a score of other unpleasant circumstances, devoutly dropped to their knees and humbly thanked God for His infinite protection and loving care.

These courageous pioneers conquered the new world at great cost and made it possible for the citizen of this country to live in security, to enjoy the many advantages that surround him, to realize with confidence that his family and possessions are offered every protection, himself cooperating in making the laws of this country looking to the continual upward trend and general improvement of conditions that materially benefit him and his fellows.

Thanksgiving Day offers an annual opportunity of expressing grateful acknowledgment to the Most High for the many favors received at His hands, but not a day should pass without appreciating the many blessings that directly result from the heroic sacrifice of that small band of Pilgrims who made a perilous landing on the giant boulder of New England's stern coast. These good people conquered their innumerable foes not with the steel and powder of a marauding and rapacious Crete, but rather with the fear of God implanted in their hearts, and with the Holy Bible as their never failing guide. L. D. W.

THANKSGIVING

By MOSES FOLSOM

"Not mindful of the growing years,
Of care and loss and pain,
My eyes are wet with thankful tears
For blessings which remain."
—John G. Whittier.

Next Thursday, Nov. 25th, is Thanksgiving. President Coolidge repeats the custom of his predecessors in asking Americans to assemble in church on that day and give thanks for life and its manifold blessings. And Governor Martin also adds his request.

As a people we have much to be thankful for. We live in an age and country where every man is the architect of his own fortune, faith, opinion and belief. We have choice of any church or not, and school doors swing free to any child. The laws give us great privileges of action. We have a thousand advantages not known to the past. If we are lazy, shiftless, indifferent and criminal in duties to ourselves and to others and suffer thereby, the fault is largely personal.

Some may say that things are going wrong in political, commercial and religious life, and in a general way that we have fallen upon evil days. The very same things were said in the past. We only need to look back and read that universal suffering and tragedy was the rule in the old days.

We live in good days, the best known in the long history of the human race and yet there are many who worry and fret and grumble.

Much of our own discontent and unhappiness is unnecessary. There are so many sources of comfort and pleasure that are passed by without thought or concern. A story is told of a man who was out with his little son one evening as the sun was going down. The whole western sky was a blaze of golden light. The father was busy with some matter in hand, when he was interrupted by the little fellow, who said:

"Papa, is that our sun?" The lad's face was aglow with the pleasure of the sight. He hesitated a moment and then replied:

"Yes, by boy, that's our sun."

"And no one can take it way from us?" asked the boy.

"No, my son, no one can take it away."

The boy was satisfied and turned to his play. But his question brings to mind a train of thought that would not leave. How many of us go blindly through life, groping our way amid the glorious things of the earth, straining our eyes to pierce the darkness rather than enjoy the light, and taking a meager portion of our share of the pleasures of life, when it is ours to know, and possess a thousand blessings of nature put here for us by a loving Creator. Ours is the golden sunset, but we do not see it. Ours is the sight of the waving green and the bloom of the flowers, but we heed them not. The song of the birds and the music of the wind in the trees were made for our ears, but we hear them not. Our minds are full of the sordid thoughts of life and business, so crowded with daily cares that we miss the glories of nature and the blessed inspiration which they bring. We need the voice of the child to awaken us to an interest in the beauties of God's wonderful creation, and need to feel as did the little lad that the beautiful sunset was made for our enjoyment and none may deny the sight to us.

In Florida the weather is a benediction. All seasons and all days permit outdoor activity. Instead of snow and ice bound streams at the Christmas season, oranges and strawberries are ripe, gardens give of their abundance to the industrious, and the fishing is good. And there's as good fish in the seas about us as ever caught.

Flowers bloom 365 days, for three years in succession and on the fourth year 366. The glory of the sun and moon and passing clouds and waters and landscapes is free. The soil responds with surprising willingness when intelligently cultivated.

Come to Florida, say we to the Northerner who seeks a better land, and it will not be difficult to verify every rightful claim made for this region of sun and comfort.

A THANKSGIVING APPEAL.

A Thanksgiving appeal for hundreds of homeless—Orphan and Needy Children under the care of "Florida's Greatest Charity" — The Children's Home Society of Florida.

Three real needs face the Children's Home Society of Florida—as Thanksgiving Day draws near. These three great needs are first: Good Homes for scores of Homeless Boys and Girls, who are pleading for good homes — loving foster-parents and a chance to make good.

Second—Money to keep this great State-wide work of the Society (which has already aided over 15,000 Florida little ones in need) going. Unless more funds are provided at once—this great work must cease—for already the Society has borrowed over $25,000 to continue to feed, clothe and provide shelter for its daily family of over 800 children—and cannot continue longer to borrow funds.

Third—Food and Clothing of every kind are needed at once. The Society will warmly welcome any food or meat or vegetables—of any kind—including chickens, turkeys, ducks, meat, preserves, jellies, canned goods, syrup, honey, potatoes, citrus fruit, etc.; children's coats, hats, caps, boys' suits, night garments, stockings, ties, ribbons, handkerchiefs, underwear, rompers, shoes, or anything else to wear—are greatly needed.

All articles other than cash should be sent to one of the three Receiving Homes of the Society as follows: Jacksonville Home, 1904 Riverside Ave.; Pensacola Home, 708 E. Jordan St.; Miami Home, 814 14th Street North.

All contributions of money should be mailed to R. V. Covington, treasurer, 428 St. James Building, Jacksonville, Florida. All applications for Homeless Children should be sent to Marvin C. "Daddy" Fagg, 418 St. James Building, Jacksonville, Florida.

Who will be the first in this community to take a Homeless Child, or get up a box or barrel or carload of provisions, children's clothing, etc., or gather up a crate of chickens, turkeys, etc., for these little Florida orphans, or who will send in the largest check or money order to the Society, to help continue this great State-wide non-sectarian work for the little future citizens of our State?

"In as much as ye do it unto one of the least of these—ye have done it unto me."—The Christ.

Over sixteen hundred little Florida helpless, homeless, crippled and afflicted children have received the aid and care of the Home Society already this year, and each day adds to the daily family of over 800 little ones under the care and supervision of the Society.

Should the Home Society be compelled to discontinue its great work because of lack of funds, hundreds of helpless, homeless little ones from wee babies on up, would be turned adrift—a tragedy that would bring disgrace to Florida—and result in indescribable suffering to little helpless children. "He helps thrice who helps quickly." Do it now—before you forget.

DEMONSTRATION ATTRACTS LARGE ATTENDANCE

The dining room of the Hunter Arms Hotel was filled with an interested crowd of ladies on Thursday and Friday in response to invitations sent out by the Crawford Electric Shop.

The occasion of this gathering was for the purpose of demonstrating to the ladies the new and improved Westinghouse Electric Range and methods used in the art of cooking with electricity as well as other improved electrical devices.

On Thursday afternoon a most interesting and instructive lecture was given by a representative of the Westinghouse company and dainty ham sandwiches were served to each guest.

Cards were passed through the audience asking each one to write and name the equipment most interested in. These were placed in a box and shaken up and one of the ladies drew one from the lot which bore the name of Mrs. Mary B. Clark, and she being the lucky one, received an electric toaster.

WILD WEST RODEO IS TO BE STAGED BY KISSIMMEE KIWANIS AND AMERICAN LEGION

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of the great Wild West Rodeo to be staged at Kissimmee next week, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, under the auspices of the Kissimmee Kiwanis Club and the Mahinson-Carson Post American Legion.

King Bros. IXL Ranch Company, presenting the rodeo at the fair grounds near Kissimmee have an elaborate program of wild west stunts in cattle roping, bull-dogging, broncho-busting and other stunts. The performances for the three days will include also local cattle men, as they have many contests that invite local cowboys and cowgirls to enter.

Jack Kings troupe of performers have beasts that they can ride any horse, mule, jack, or steer that may be brought to the fair grounds and the cowboys of Osceola county are invited to bring any "bad actors" in that line to the shows held for three nights and one matinee next week.

Funds from the shows will be used to buy uniforms for the Kissimmee Juvenile band.

Included in the program are performances by "Midnight," said to be the world's famous high jumping horse. Riding wild buffaloes will be a number on the program and nothing smacking of the old western life will be too rough for Jack Kin's outfit.

We predict Osceola cowboys and cowgirls will show up on this occasion.

SALLIE MAKES A RESOLUTION

I hurried from the living room and got back into bed before father and Curtiss finally stopped talking and then, for a long time, I lay thinking over the strange story that I had just heard revealed. At first I felt only resentment towards father for his interference, and then, a great wave of tenderness surged over me as I analyzed his reason for doing so and realized that he had wanted to save me from the great unhappiness my mother had known because she had raised her eyes from the matrimonial path. There was no doubt about it, the suggestion he had made to Curtiss had been most unusual coming from him and yet when I remembered that his whole married life had been anything but orthodox, I began to understand. He had evidently felt that I would be happier in the end and perhaps he was right. For up to the time that Letitia Evans had come along with her flaunting charms, I had regarded Curtiss as uninteresting safe and since that time I had thought of him in an entirely different light. Men have greater love for their wives, I've been told, when they feel that they are also desirable in the eyes of other men and the same fundamental law also holds with women to an unbelievable extent.

So dad had succeeded in his plan, for certain it was that I cared more for Curtiss than I had at any other time. Regardless of the way I should have felt about the way he had collaborated with father in the plan, I was only conscious of a great joy of possession welling up in my heart which completely obliterated all the jealous fears and suspicions with which I had been obsessed. It was most satisfying to know just how the flirtation with Letitia Evans had begun and how it had come to an end. I was so thoroughly relieved about the whole entanglement that I could even be amused at certain complications which had come about.

And so I decided that I would not confess to either of them what I had heard. It would only be embarrassing to everyone concerned and would cause explanations from them both.

That question settled in my mind, another arose. Should I tell Curtiss about Barrington Pierce? I had put the matter entirely out of my mind since my return but now I wanted to fight the thing out. I wanted to be honest with him at all times and yet I wondered how much a woman should confess to her husband and how much she should leave untold. It was an age-old struggle. On one side sentimental frankness urging me to make a clean breast of the things which had occurred in New York and, on the other, wisdom and common-sense pleading with me to let well-enough alone. I disliked deceit and yet I longed for that perfect harmony which, after so long a time, it now seemed possible for me to obtain.

On the other hand, if I did not tell Curtiss and he discovered later that Barry and I had been practically engaged it would probably destroy his faith. I had kissed him too? What would he think of that? Ohhh! I shivered a little under the blankets for I knew he would never understand. It was true that I had expected to divorce Curtiss at the time believing that he wanted to marry someone else and, from my own viewpoint, I felt that I was absolutely justified in what I had done, but, I knew that it would look to Curtiss as if I were still inclined to be a flirt.

Besides, I argued with myself what good would it do him to know? It was certainly my duty, as I saw it, above everything else, to keep him contented and happy and I wanted so to be a successful wife! Of course I had many qualms of conscience because the thing had happened at all, but I tried to put it from my mind for I felt there was nothing to be gained by dwelling in the past. My happiness with Curtiss lay in the rich companionship that the future would hold. Besides, he had the best of my love, and in comparison to that what did a few kisses matter that had been given more as a sister or a friend? So I definitely decided that I would not bring unnecessary pain to Curtiss by foolish confessions of the past and I resolved never to be flirtatious again. We rise only by mistakes and as long as I had gained experience, which in the future would stand me in good stead, I determined to let it go at that.

Thankful Brown

Since my return from New York I had become a part of the social whirl, which in a town the size of Birmingham, is a ceaseless round of bridge parties, dances and teas. Curtiss had made rapid strides financially and I felt that once again I could afford to take part in the sort of life I had led before our fortune was swept away.

The morning of the day father arrived had been taken up with a meeting of the church unit to which I belonged and which was composed of a group of young matrons who met once a week, presumably to sew but the sessions had resolved themselves into more of a social function with its exchange of gossip and a delectable luncheon served at one of the member's homes. Some persons scoff at this type of effort which is being put forth by various "guilds," "circles," "units," and "bands" all over the South. They claim that the whole idea is incongruous since the women first donate the articles, then sew on them for days, later selling them at an annual bazaar for less than the original cost. They believe that an out-and-out gift of money would serve the purposes of the church equally as well. However there is a certain class of women who feel that some sort of church work is "good for the soul," balancing, as it were, the utter materiality of their social lives.

One splendid feature of the movement is that certain girls who have little or no social activity, are thus meeting other women their own age and it is often the only recreation that brightens their lives. One girl of this type was Thankful Brown. Certain characteristics belong legitimately to certain names. For instance, Thankful Brown was quiet, old-fashioned and demure. Just as the name implied. She was past twenty-five and seemed even older, with a sweet understanding nature which had been enriched, no doubt, by a hard life in which she struggled to keep house for a widowed mother and two sisters younger than herself.

She had taught me to cross-stitch a cup-towel on my first visit to the guild, sensing immediately the fact that I could not sew. She had taken infinite pains with me on each thing which I had attempted since that day and I felt that sympathetic spark which, once in a great while, we feel when we have made a friend.

Although Thankful was born of aristocratic parents and was one of the most estimable characters in town she did not enter into any of the gaities of our set and it was only during the guild meetings that I saw her at all. But at times she invariably made an impression on me which lasted for days.

That very morning she had said something to me which haunted my thoughts. We had been sitting apart from the others when the conversation began. I had complained of being tired because I had been up so late dancing the night before and also many parties I had to go to during the day.

"What do you get out of it?" she asked in her quiet, beautiful voice. "You're really much too fine to give your strength and beauty and intelligence to that sort of thing."

I was frankly amazed at her expression of disapproval, which was made more impressive by the ring of sincerity in her voice.

"It does seem a pointless way to live, I'll admit," I replied.

"Then why don't you quit? Be brave enough to come o nand be separate from the crowd! Then when night came, and you were tired it would be the natural exhaustion of work well done, than which there is no greater joy!" Her eyes gleamed.

"But what could I do?" I asked.

"I've thought out a plan for you," she said, " and, if you are interested I will talk it over with you tomorrow morning at ten."

I felt peculiarly happy to think that perhaps, through the plan of this unselfish girl, I would be able to follow an urge which had ever struggled within me against the frivolity of a butterfly life.

Thankful Brown Tells Sallie Her Plan

The next morning at exactly ten o'clock I rang the doorbell of the Brown residence, which was located on a hillside in the oldest part of town. While I waited for it to be answered I looked around. The house gave evidence of a more prosperous past and, though it was sadly in need of paint and marigolds and larkspur would add their quaint blossoms to prevent the criticism of the more up-to-date passers-by.

The garden, which stretched on both sides of the old brick walk, was typical of Thankful and I knew she spent many hours here. Violets grew on either side of the path and one felt, instinctively, that in the summer hollyhocks and marigolds and larkspur would add their quaint blossoms to the place which was so evidently of other times. The yard was enclosed by a fence over which honeysuckle and roses would climb in the spring.

A pretty young girl of about seventeen opened the door. It was plain to see that she was not at all the old-fashioned type. Her mannerisms were all of the new generation and there was a bit of a frown between her eyes, as if she resented being called from a new novel she held in her hand. Instantly I knew that this was one of Thankful's sisters whom she struggled to shield from all hardships by overtaxing her own strength, which was none too robust.

"Thankie's in the kitchen," she announced, "putting up jam. Go on back." She designated the rear of the house with a wave of her hand and rudely started towards the sitting room reading as she went.

The pantry was a large and cheerful place. Sunshine filtered through dotted-swiss curtains edged in blue gingham and Thankful was standing by a white, pine shelf mixing the ingredients for a cake.

"I was told that you were putting up preserves," I said, after she had greeted me cordially and urged me to sit down. "I suppose Kitten told you that. Shows how much she knows about what's going on back here," she smiled indulgently. "I finished those an hour ago," she nodded to a cupboard which held row after row of glasses, all of uniform size with fresh paraffin tops. The grape jelly shone like old Burgundy in the bright morning light and there were also jars of golden marmalade with bits of lemon peel and spices which Thankful said Kitten liked with tiny hot biscuits and tea.

"You smart thing!" I exclaimed, "and what kind of cake is that complicated thing going to be?"

"Chocolate-marshmallow-fudge," she enumerated, "the kind Addie adores!"

The jelly then was made for Kitten and the cake was the kind of which Addie was especially fond. Always, it seemed to me, this lovely girl was thinking of someone other than herself.

"Where is Addie now?" I asked.

"She's taking a business course," she replied. "Mother disliked the idea intensely but," she blushed. "it seemed necessary with things so frightfully dear. And Kitten just couldn't go out in the world. She's the baby you know. Just a minute," she flung over her shoulder, "while I put this in to bake." I could see her through the door as she tested the over, changed the damper on the antiquated wood stove and then returned.

"I was thinking if you really mean it about wanting to do something besides play that I might be able to suggest a thing that was offered to me," she began, resuming the conversation which we had started at the circle meeting the day before.

"Well, I AM serious about it and if you'll just tell me what I can do I certainly will be glad. You see, Thankful, all my life I've done nothing but sit over a bridge table or chase about to luncheons where you see the same type of people and talk about nothing but dieting and permanent waves. Really I'm give anything to try my hand at something else."

"That's the way I had you figured out," she replied, "you looked to me like a person who was straining at a leash, struggling to free yourself from conditions which held you too close. So it occurred to me that you might love a proposition which, as I said, was made to me."

"Please tell me all about it," I urged.

"It's a book shop," she announced. "There is the most charming place on Twentieth Street down town that a Russian owns, but he wants to sell out and go to France.

"On Twentieth Street," I mused. "What place is it? I don't seem to know it at all."

"No one does because it hasn't been opened to the public yet. You see he fixed up the place and then his wife, who is a Parisienne, became very unhappy here, so he decided it would be better to sell out and leave before he spent a lot more money advertising and getting the shop properly launched. He is willing to get out for much less than he spent."

"How thrilling!" I cried. "really, Thankful, I can't imagine anything more fun than owning a cunning book shop and running myself! How much does he want for it?"

She smiled. "I love your enthusiasm," she said. "I believe you're ready to write a check, but I wouldn't want you to do anything until you talk to him about it and see the place for yourself."

"But it sounds perfect!" I declared. "how on earth did you know about it?" I asked.

"Well, you see, I've always had a passion for books. I took a library course at school and if I'd been rich I should have been a collector for there isn't anything that gives me more pleasure than association with books. I thought I'd get a position in the library here after father passed on but Kitten and Addie didn't take to housekeeping so I felt it would be better for them if I stayed at home."

Yes, I thought, while Kitten flitted about to parties and Addie went out to some interesting work and mingled with people, forming stimulating contacts and getting colorful experiences, while she stayed at home to cook and sew and drudge her life away in drab and monotonous routine!

Suddenly I had an idea.

"Listen, Thankful. Tell you what I'll do. I want this shop and I'm going to have it, but I need your help. I don't a darn thing about books. All I can do is discuss Michael Arlen and Carl Van Vechten and other authors of 'best sellers' as they come along, but when it comes to real literature I'm a total blank. The only decent things I've read were at college and I've forgotten most of them. Turgenef, Tolstoy and Balzac sounds like a salad dressing on a trans-Atlantic liner to me! But," I concluded, "I could handle the modern stuff and you could lord it over the high brow department. How's that?"

Her face gleamed. Her deep brown eyes shone like stars. "Oh," she breathed, "how wonderful that would be! All my life it has been my dream. Books. To be with them. To touch them, to rustle their pages and to smell them! The very odor of books spurs my imagination," she dreamed for a moment, then swiftly her expression changed. "But how," she asked, "would mother and the girls get along?"

"Never you mind about that. You'll earn enough to hire a cook and a girl to clean up and have something left over for clothes besides."

"Kitten does need a new evening dress. She's just at the age when she goes to a lot of dances and perhaps if I went to work Addie wouldn't have to take a job."

"Call your friend and tell him we're coming down. Please."

She went to the phone and while she was away my thoughts played with the fascinating idea of the shop. Just that morning my father had presented me with a check for a more than generous amount. I wouldn't tell Curtiss until I had secured the shop. Then I'd call him up and tell him to come to a certain number down town. He would find me bareheaded behind a counter and wearing a smock (lavender would be lovely for Thankful and myself) and then, what would he say?

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Ivor G. Hyndman, D.D., minister.

Mrs. Beake and Mrs. Lawrence delighted the congregation last Sunday morning with their singing. The two voices blended most harmoniously in the duet while the solo parts were beautifully rendered in turn. We hope it will be possible to have these two sing together again in the near future.

Miss Knowlton was the soloist for the evening service. Her two songs were highly appreciated.

Miss Mace, missionary on furlough from China, gave an interesting address at the morning service. In the afternoon she spoke to a large congregation in behalf of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. Interest was added to the meeting by a demonstration of Chinese home life with Miss Mace and Mrs. Worley taking the principal parts. Mrs. Worley is a member of our local church, after 40 years spent in the Chinese mission field.

A unique feature of the service next Sunday morning will be a trio given in the sign language by Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Philpott and Mr. Roy Sapp, three members of the "Silent Class" in our Sunday school. One is not often given the opportunity of seeing this beautiful and inspiring method of praising the Lord in song. Once seen it is something long to be remembered.

There will be special music at both morning and evening service.

At a meeting of members of the former Priscilla class it was decided to reorganize as a mixed class, giving opportunity for the husbands to meet with their wives at the Sunday school hour. Mr. Denoyer was selected as teacher.

According to the annual custom the Epworth League plans to provide Thanksgiving dinner for some of the needy people of the community.

He was a charted member of the Orlando Odd Fellows, Rebecca Encampment. Only recently he sold his home in St. Cloud and had moved to Narcoossee where he was developing a small truck farm.

EXHIBITION OF OLD BOOKS

The exhibition of old Bibles and Hymnals at the Methodist Episcopal church this week has attracted a great deal of attention, as there has never been anything like it in the city before.

Dr. Hyndman's call for old Bibles and hymn books as well as other old and curious books brought forth many books of ancient dates, some over two hundred years old, the most of them well preserved. Sunday evening there was a large congregation, many of whom came early and went into the vestry of the church to look over the choice collection on display. A geography published in 1815 received a great deal of attention. A copy of Pilgrims Progress in short hand was admired through none attempted to read it. Works of Alexander Pope published in London in 1770 was one of the old books. Mrs. Flora Cox had the smallest Bible and one of the oldest. The leather cover was two inches by one and a half, the thickness of the book a little over one inch, containing four hundred pages with good plain type. A book of sermons by Martin Luther was admired, also a Universalist Hymnal published in 1813. There are many more of these valuable books, including a Bible owned by the pastor, published in the Welch language. A German Bible two hundred years old, amod others equally curious, and they will be put on exhibit at one of the book stores later.

The sermon Sunday evening by Dr. Hyndman was in keeping with the display of books, the subject being, "Romance of the Bible," which was a wonderful story of the many thrilling dangers by fire and by water through which the Bible had passed before it had escaped all its enemies and was at last published in many languages and free for the whole world to read and treasure as the Book above all other books.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. B. Atchison, pastor.

New faces are seen at almost every service now. Last Sunday morning the pastor preached upon Phil. 4:12-13, "Must the sinner work out his own salvation with fear and trembling, or is he saved by faith alone in Christ as his Savior?" The subject for the evening service was, "Meeting God in Eternity." The quartet sang, "Eternity is drawing nigh." Two new members were received into the fellowship of the church at the morning service and one more in the evening. There will be a baptismal service at the close of the evening service next Sunday. If there are others that would like to be buried with Christ in Christian baptism at this time please see the pastor during the week.

There were 105 present at the Whosoever-Will Bible class last Sunday morning at Sunday school, and 39 in the Young People's class (Philathea-Baraceas). With our new furnace we feel sure that we will be able to heat the entire church so that it will be comfortable no matter what the weather may be.

Don't forget the lectures on the Prophecies of Daniel every Wednesday evening at the church. Here is your opportunity to make a systematic study of the great prophecies of that book. These prophecies give a clear outline of the "Times of the Gentiles" beginning with Nebuchadnezzar and ending with the Anti-Christ who will be in power when the Savior comes back to earth again. All students of prophecy believe that we are now living in the "Latter Days" and that the second coming of Christ may reasonably be expected most any time. Everybody is welcome to attend these Wednesday evening meetings, also bring your questions which the pastor will be glad to try and answer.

The Union Thanksgiving service will be held at the Christian Church on Thursday morning. Dr. Hyndman will be the preacher.

The B. Y. P. U. under the leadership of C. L. Wheat is putting on some fine programs every Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. Come out and enjoy them. Something new every time.

The quartet will sing again next Sunday morning. The pastor has been asked to preach upon 2 Cor. 6:17, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord." We will be glad to take this text for our sermon on Sunday morning. Strangers always welcome.

PRESBYTERIAN NOTES

The Young People's Union Prayer Meeting Wednesday evening led by Rev. Karl Barth of Palatka was followed by a social and refreshments.

The Bazaar of the Westminster Aid will be held December 2, 3, and 4 at the Chamber of Commerce.

The Missionary Society has arranged to give the stereoptican lecture "Syria, the Gateway of Central Asia," Sunday night, November 28th. Beautiful colored slides will set forth to the eye the life in this land of the Bible as it is now, much of it not changed for these thousands of years. The offering will be applied to help the Missionary Society meet its quota. As it is the time of the annual bank offering it is hoped it will be a liberal one.

Preceding the stereoptican lecture will be a service of song and music. Mrs. E. A. Cowger will give some special selections on the organ. Mrs. Cowger has been giving special attention to the study of the pipe organ during her vacations for the past several years and with her general thorough training in music will bring a treat to her many friends who hear her for the first time on the pipe organ.

Isle of Pines-Porto Rico Unrestricted Shipments Obviate Laws of Florida

C. C. Commander, General Manager of the Florida Citrus Exchange, states that while the Florida Green Fruit Law was operating very effectively to prevent green citrus from this state reaching the markets, the effect of the law as far as protecting marketing prices and the consumer was concerned was largely destroyed by the fact that the Isle of Pines and Porto Rican shippers were under no restrictions of a similar sort and could therefore send fruit which did not come up to Florida maturity standards to Northern markets. This has led to cash in on early season high priced markets of which Florida could not avail themselves.

Mr. Commander denounced this condition as being unfair to the best interests of Florida citrus growers. Because of this condition Mr. Commander has written Florida congressmen outlining the situation and asking their consideration of the matter and advice as to how it could be corrected.

"I believe that the Florida Green Fruit Law is being made a tremendous asset to the Florida citrus industry," said Mr. Commander. "It is the best law on the subject that we ever had and while there may be room for improvement, much good can and is being derived from the rigid enforcement of the law.

"There is, however, a very serious factor which prevents Florida citrus growers from obtaining full benefits from the law. The objectives of the law are too well known throughout the state to need comment here. Their accomplishment is seriously hampered by the fact that grapefruit from other shipping sections is not under comparable legislation and that despite the fact that the Florida law is being rigidly enforced, green, immature fruit is reaching the markets from these other sections.

"There is considerable dissatisfaction on the part of Florida citrus growers due to the fact that unrestricted shipments of immature fruit from the Isle of Pines and Porto Rico are allowed to enter American markets and cash in on the high early prices to the disadvantage of the Florida industry.

"This is a situation which I believe should be corrected. I feel that steps should be taken immediately to that end. I have written our congressmen and find that they support the idea without exception. It is a matter which we must carry through to a favorable conclusion for the best interests of the Florida citrus industry."

Mr. Commander sent forward letters to Senators Duncan U. Fletcher and Park Trammel; also Congressmen William U. Sears, Herbert J. Drane, John H. Smithwick and R. A. Greene. The letter follows:

My dear Sir:

There is considerable feeling among the growers in Florida that they are not being treated fairly in the matter of shipping green fruit.

As you know, there is a State Law, which prevents the shipment of fruit until it passes a certain test, which law I think is very good. It is being rigidly enforced and I am sure it will result in good to the industry, but the growers are resenting the shipment of green and immature fruit from Porto Rico and the Isle of Pines into our markets.

They are permitted to ship fruit into this country without passing any test, realizing very high prices and at the same time destroying the very thing that we are trying to preserve, that is the confidence of the consumer in citrus.

I was wondering if it would not be possible to pass some kind of Federal regulation preventing the importations of citrus fruits into our markets until it passes the same test that our fruit passes. I would appreciate your giving this matter consideration and advising your reaction.

Thanking you, I am,
Yours very truly,
FLORIDA CITRUS EXCHANGE,
C. C. Commander,
General Manager.

To date, replies have been received from Fletcher, Drane, Smithwick and Sears. They advise that the matter will receive favorable consideration at their hands and that they are ready to carry the project forward in the interests of Florida citrus.

Senator Fletcher's letter follows:

My dear Mr. Commander:

I have your letter of the 19th.

I will be glad to take up the matter mentioned with officials of the Department of Agriculture and see what the situation is and what suggestions they have to offer.

Really, I cannot understand how and why any green and immature citrus fruit from any Country or State finds a ready market.

You will be further advised in due course.

Very truly yours,
DUNCAN U. FLETCHER.

H. J. Drane replies as follows:

My dear Mr. Commander:

I am in receipt of your favor of October 19th referring to the Florida Green Fruit Law, of which of course I have a general knowledge, and it may interest you to know that the first Green Fruit Law which was ever passed in Florida was handled by myself as a representative of the Florida Citrus Exchange, working under the direction of the late William Chase Temple. I was not at that time a member of the Legislature. That must have been in 1911.

Subsequently, when I was President of the Senate, I again was very active in behalf of getting a law passed which would strengthen the original one. I have always been a very loyal worker—not only for the orange growers, but for the Exchange. For that reason, I would naturally be friendly to any law State or Federal, which would improve conditions in that respect. The forthcoming session of Congress meets early in December, recesses for Christmas, meets again in January, and adjourns on the 4th of March.

I do not believe it possible to push a law through Congress on such short notice, but if the Citrus Exchange people and others interested, whether they be exchange or independent, will have drafted such a bill as you have in mind, I should be very glad indeed to give it every assistance and arrange for a proper hearing before the Committee on Agriculture, keeping you advised.

With very kind regards, I am, dear sir,

Yours sincerely,
HERBERT J. DRANE.

J. H. Smithwick expressed surprise that there was not already legislation of this kind. His letter follows:

My dear Mr. Commander:

I have your letter of October 19, and without looking into the matter, it seems to me that your suggestion is a favorable one, and that Federal Legislation could be had as outlined by you. I am surprised if there is not already legislation of this kind. Being somewhat out of the Citrus Belt, I have not had occasion to go into these matters, but will do so, and let you hear from me further. If there is no law on this subject now, there ought to be and I am with you on the proposition.

Very sincerely yours,
J. H. SMITHWICK.

We. J. Sears advised that he will take the matter up with the Secretary of Agriculture on his return to Washington and ascertain whether the Pure Food Law does not already cover the suggestion made by Mr. Commander. His letter follows:

Dear Mr. Commander:

Yours received and same noted.

In reply thereto, I will state I have carefully read your letter and when I return to Washington, I will take the matter up with the secretary of Agriculture and if the present Pure Food Law does not cover the suggestion you have made, I will have a conference with the Florida delegation and see what we can do.

As you know, it is always a pleasure to co-operate with the citrus growers of Florida. With kind regards, I am,

Yours very truly,
W. J. SEARS.

LOOP SYSTEM OF HIGHWAYS FOR FLORIDA TO BE SOUGHT

PANAMA CITY, Fla.,—It is the aim of the Gulf Coast highways association to have federal aid projects made of as many as possible of the roads built as links to complete the loop system of highways for Florida, according to William L. Wilson, of this city, general vice-president.

Resolution committing the body of this policy, introduced by John A. Scruggs, vice president for Leon county, was adopted at a recent meeting of the board of directors and executive council.

Thankful.—Thanksgiving is coming. What are you thankful for? Think it over. Into country have a people so much in the way of material prosperity to be thankful for, or to plan to spend it in wicked or righteous ways.

There are more than one million wild horses still in this country, principally in the Western states.

GENERAL REMOVAL OF ALL OLD SIGNS URGED IN FLORIDA

DAYTONA BEACH, Nov. 5—"Florida needs a house cleaning to clear away the tombstones of dead subdivisions," and other evidences of the "exuberant expansion period, if the state is to attract new tenants," John H. Ihlder, manager of the civic development department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told the annual convention of Florida realtors here today.

"The visitor to Florida today notes the need of a general cleaning," he declared. "What have been called the 'tombstone' of dead subdivisions are too prominent; arches that mark the entrances to cemeteries of hopes, street signs that tell of streets traveled only by prospects, stakes that mark the graves of first payments, these are of the exuberant past. They should have no place in the picture of the present and the future. They should be wiped out and with them should go the signs that border the Florida highways advertising subdivisions which have passed away."

BIG APPLES CROP TO BOOST UNITED STATES HEALTH

America should have its healthiest year in 1927, if the old adage about apples and health still holds, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. The estimated apple crop for this year is more than 234,000,000 bushels, which is the largest crop since 1914 and the third largest in the history of the United States. Because the 1926 production is fully one-third larger than last year, apple prices have dropped to the lowest point in years and give promise of remaining at a low level throughout the season.

Practically all of the increased production of the commercial apple crop this year was made in the east, the principal apple orchard section of the country, according to the foundation. Here favorable conditions prevailed throughout the growing season, although some sections reported the crop as maturing later than usual. The crop in the northwest, the only other important commercial apple section in the country, however, suffered severely from freezing in late September with the result that yields were materially reduced.

The export trade is likely to affect the apple market to some extent. While increased consumption in England, one of the big consumers of American apples, is not expected this year because of the continued unemployment which is keeping the buying power of the country low, Germany, another of the biggest consumers, is taking more American apples than the year before. Improvements in the purchasing power of the German people and reduced apple crops in European countries which compete with the United States in the German apple market are given as the reasons for this year's increase in the American apple trade with that country.

POTATOES AND PRICES

In Aroostook County, Maine, upon the northeast tip of the United States, they grow their potatoes big.

This year, Walter Christie, of Presque Isle, in Aroostook County, produced 154,000 barrels of potatoes on 1,400 acres, which every farmer knows is better than an average crop.

The estimated cost of producing these potatoes is $1.70 a barrel. By selling at $4 a barrel, Mr. Christie apparently stands to clear $354,200, surely not a bad year's work.

Every so often a story of this nature is printed in the newspapers and travels half around the world. It has quality called human interest that makes a news story good. It pictures man as victor in his battle with nature.

And it seems to show all the farmer needs do is walk into his fields and pick up the dollars, that the farm is a gold mine needing only to be prospected and exploited by its owner.

The trouble with such a story is that the battle needs a background. It makes no mention of the bad years for Aroostook County potato raisers, and there have been several bad years since 1920.

And the farmer knows, too, he is getting but 83 cents for his dollar when measured against pre-war prices, as is shown in the report of the agricultural department of the federal government. Up to October 15, a decline of 4 per cent in the average of farm-product prices is reported. The price of all farm crops may be shown at 120 with the pre-war prices taken as 100, but still, and he knows it, the farmer gets but 83 cents for his dollar when he steps into the market to buy with it.

Florida's Famous Parson Brown Orange Originated From China

CLERMONT, Nov. 15.—An article written by F. C. Grutke, of South Clermont, and given much publicity recently covering the early history of the famous Parson Brown orange, has brought out the fact that in 1923 E. L. Carney, of Carney Brothers, of Ocala, prepared a detailed history of the origin of the Parson Brown orange for the Florida State Horticultural society, in which many additional facts were given.

It was in 1874 that the Carney Brothers heard of an exceptionally fine orange which ripened early in the season on the place of Parson Brown in Sumter county near Webster. On a visit to the Brown home the Carney Brothers found five seedling orange trees. After testing all five, one tree was selected because it was a prolific bearer, the fruit was of a superior flavor, and it ripened earlier than any orange that Carney Bothers, pioneers in orange culture, had examined.

A bargain was entered into between Parson Brown and the Carney Brothers, who paid $80 for the tree of their selection, with the understanding that the tree should be left standing and budwood cut as needed.

Every few weeks thereafter E. L. Carney cut budwood from the tree to use in building up his large grove on the shore of Lake Weir in Marion county. Although the grove is now owned by others, it is still known as the Carney grove and is one of the most valuable grove properties in the county.

As to the history of the five trees, they were 14 years old in the spring of 1875. The trees were started from seed taken from an orange which is supposed to have come from China, and, according to Parson Brown's story, all the trees were from one and the same orange, although orange growers generally are of the belief that the budwood from the tree purchased by the Carney Brothers produces a sweeter and better orange than those grown from any of the other four trees.

WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The W. C. T. U. has been very busy of late with a good attendance at every meeting. Friday, Nov. 19th, they held the second meeting for the month, having 20 present. Mrs. Wetherbee, the secretary, being absent from the city, Mrs. Kibbee took the minutes. Mrs. Ward conducted devotionals. One or more members have been added at every meeting held recently. The Temple is being kept open for the use of tourists and those ladies who wish to come in and rest when about town shopping, and hostesses for the coming week were enlisted. A short program was enjoyed and it was announced that Saturday the Union would furnish the program at Grand Army Hall for the regular entertainment there. It was voted that members accept the kind invitation received from Mrs. Katherine James to hold a Silver Tea in her dining room at the Cafeteria, Monday afternoon. The meeting closed with W. C. T. U. benediction.

On Monday afternoon at 2:30, 20 members assembled at the Cafeteria and were graciously received by Mrs. James who made them welcome and gave them every attention as guests. A social half hour was followed by an impromptu program which was interesting and full of good things. Mrs. Benedict read a newspaper article treating on the prohibition question at this time. Mrs. Rickard gave a short talk in her forceful and convincing manner which was much appreciated. Mrs. Everett read a newspaper clipping, as did Mrs. Cox, and Mrs. Bullard, also Mrs. Miner. Mrs. Nina Bonnell recited in her very pleasing manner "A Little Heaven Here Below." Mrs. Kibbee read a humorous clipping. Mrs. Brand read newspaper article. Mrs. Miner read a poem and Mrs. Cox read "Then and Now." Others read or recited.

Singing closed the program and Mrs. James served refreshments of fried cakes and coffee on her snowy white tables around which the guests were gathered.

Thanking the hostess for her courtesy the ladies departed having enjoyed a delightful afternoon.
